Halled Company, Kapapala KAMEHAMEHA DAY

HONOLULU SPENT A QUIET ELEVENTH FOR FEW OF THE OLD ATTRACTIONS SURVIVE.

And yesterday was Kamehameha

If the spirits of the mighty dead could nave wandered through the streets of Honolulu in full possession of the fact that it was officially June II what would they have thought of the preent generation?

Where were the flags and the decorations? Where were the gally garlanded ones who celegrated the feast day of the greatest of Hawaiians. Where were the gay crowds rollicking Walkikiwards to see the races at Kapfolani park? Alus, there were but visions of a past, not so recent but already grow- artistic. Drama, living pictures, fancy ing misty.

Honolulu yesterday was as fair a representation of Pompelt as any liv- ols Co., Benson, Smith's, at the hotels ing city could present, in fact had it and at the door. Price one dollar, not been for the early morning exodus of the Sunday school picnickers and the later parade of the police who wished to tell Sheriff Hl Henry Just how much cents. they loved him, the town might well have taken a complete siesta.

The street cars ran as usual, but even they seemed tired and early in the morning one or two stores opened on the off chance that some tourist had lost his other collar and might take a chance at knocking the town if he could not replace it. Hanawaki Kruger was the only man in the place who made any money. He opened up on time and in a few minutes his shop was filled with wealthy citizens who wanted their watches fixed as they had stopped in a most unaccountable manner. Hanawaki sized up the situation at once. The watches were not broken. they had simply gone to sleep. It cost each man $2.75 to have his time piece awakened.

The palaces of liquid joy did a good onsiness of course. They always do. Things livened up a bit during the afternoon when the people turned out for the baseball game and also for the doings at the Zoo but on the whole the day was one of deadly dulness very unployed in the manufacture of lealnier like what it used to be in the old days.
